IN KIWI COUNTRY President Aquino addresses the Filipino community in Auckland as he begins a state visit to New Zealand on Monday. Mr. Aquino flies to Canberra on Wednesday for a state visit to Australia on the invitation of Prime Minister Julia Gillard.

P-Noy hits GMA even in far away Auckland

By Michael Lim Ubac

AUCKLAND, New Zealand—Just two hours after arriving for his first state visit to New Zealand, President Aquino immediately took a swipe at his predecessor for the alleged massive corruption and mismanagement on her watch.

Without naming former President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, Mr. Aquino reminded members of the Filipino community of the evils that pervaded the corridors of power for close to a decade, including the "milking" of the national coffers by high officials.

"Di ba marami kong mga rito para siguro ko balita mas maraming chismis. Gingagawan mo na, gusto mo pang gawing bahala (There are many things there in New

Palace: Libel charge based on penal code

IN SUPPORT OF PERLING Netizens created this Facebook page to support Esperlita Garcia, who has been sued and arrested for libel for taking her opposition to mining to cyberspace.

BAYOMBONG, Nueva Vizcaya—Environmentalists and Internet users have rallied behind Esperlita "Perling" Garcia, an antimining advocate who was arrested on Thursday on libel charges for a purported critical post on Facebook in spite of the Supreme Court's suspension of the cybercrime law.

In Manila, however, presidential spokesperson Edwin Lacierda said the arrest of the 62-year-old Garcia, who was detained overnight and released on Friday after posting a P10,000 bail, was prompted by a violation of the Revised Penal Code.

Lacierda denied the claim of the militant youth group

EU grants ₱312M to Mindanao refugees

By Tarra Quismundo

SAYING its support for the Philippines' peace process was not just "a nice declaration of empty words," the European Union (EU) yesterday announced a P312-million grant to help provide livelihood for families displaced by conflict in Mindanao.

The EU handed the grant to the World Food Programme (WFP) to help fund the two-year project "Enhancing the Resilience of Internally Displaced Persons in Central Mindanao by Strengthening Livelihoods," to be implemented with key Philippine agencies.

The grant came a week after the administration of President Aquino and the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) signed a framework agreement to end a four-decade

Akbayan defends party-list stand

By Leila B. Salaverria

A PARTY-LIST group that has members now entrenched in the executive department says it remains committed to working for reforms and pushing for policies for the benefit of sectors such as farmers, laborers, women and informal workers.

The 14-year-old Akbayan believes it has every right to remain in the party-list system, despite what critics in "the elite or Left" are saying about its more powerful stature given its coalition with President Aquino's political party and access to Malacañang.

Its members who are in the executive are Commission on Human Rights Chair Loretta Rosales, National Anti-Poverty

More Pinays drinking beer, says Church radio survey

By Jocelyn R. Uy

BELIEVE it or not, there are more Filipino women than men who drink beer.

A study conducted by the Church-run Radio Veritas from May to June found that of its 2,480 respondents nationwide, 52 percent were female beer drinkers and 48 percent were male beer drinkers.

The study also showed that beer drinking was more prevalent among married consumers (57 percent) than among the single and unattached (43 percent).

Early learning is best—study

By Ana G. Roa

EARLY intervention in public education improves student performance at later levels of schooling, a World Bank paper using data from the Philippines shows.

Futoshi Yamauchi and Tangcan Liu—in "Impacts of an Early Stage Education Intervention on Students' Learning Achievement: Evidence from the Philippines"—measured the effects of the Department of Education's Third Elementary Education Project (TEEP).

The TEEP—implemented from 2000 to 2006 with financial help from the Japan Bank for International Cooperation (JBIC) and the World Bank—introduced a package of investments, including school building construction and renovation, textbooks, teacher training, school-based management and other facilities and equipment support.

"Interestingly, the estimates in textbooks for the earlier grades have larger positive effects on student performance in the higher grades," the authors said.

They found evidence that distributing textbooks to fourth graders resulted in increased test scores, more than when textbooks were distributed to fifth and sixth graders.

The findings also showed that public investment in elementary education would likely have a positive longer term impact on student performance at later stages such as high school and college, the authors said.

"This argument justifies large public investments to improve school quality at the early stage of public education, because the cumulative benefits are gradually realized at later stages in the education system and labor market," the paper said.

"If the marginal effect is constant across all grades, our estimates indicate that the six-year exposure [2000-2006] increases the score by about 12-15 points," they said.

MISSION STATEMENT

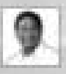

We, the Association of cable TV operators in the Philippines, stand united in the pursuit of a common vision: an industry run by professionals, providing the highest standards of cable TV service to the Philippine public.

We aim, above all else, to become true professionals, with the specialized knowledge and sufficient academic preparation required in the practice of our profession. As a result, we shall operate optimally in the service of our subscribers and the general public. We shall continue to update our cable TV systems and service as we learn the latest trends and innovations. We shall make full use of our cable TV systems in the effective dissemination of news, information and knowledge.

As part of our pursuit of professionalism, we offer the Association as a forum to all cable TV operators, government representatives and other parties for the discussion and deliberation of relevant issues, policies and programs. In a just and legal manner, and in fulfillment of our duties as members of the Cable TV industry, we shall work for the protection of their lawful interests and support them fully on matters affecting their cable TV operations and the industry as a whole.

We, therefore, work together for this three-fold mission: adequate protection and assistance to the members of the industry, active participation in the national effort towards progress and development, and commitment to the significant upliftment of the industry.

THE PHILIPPINE CABLE TELEVISION ASSOCIATION INC. (PCTA) is the umbrella organization of cable television operators in the Philippines. Its membership today includes the biggest cable operators in the country as well as the medium and small cable operators who, through their pain-staking efforts, have succeeded in bringing up-to-date programs, information, and technology to the farthest island in the country. To date, the PCTA has 317 regular members and 26 affiliate members. Together, the PCTA member cable operators are serving 89% of the total cable TV subscribers in the Philippines.

PCTA'S BIRTH

In 1987, the change in national leadership emboldened small independent cable television operators to organize themselves to promote and protect their interests, and to mobilize and elevate the cable television industry in the map of respected Philippine business. Thus was born the PCTA.

Under the leadership of Ramon Magsaysay, Jr., the association first worked for the repeal of the presidential decree granting exclusive national franchise to only one company. The association's efforts paid off on June 26, 1987 when President Corazon C. Aquino signed Executive Order No. 205 preventing the decree and in effect, democratizing the industry.

Taking the cue from President Aquino's issuance of the Executive Order, the National Telecommunications Commission promulgated in April 1988, after numerous hearings, the rules and regulations that would govern the installation, operation and maintenance of cable television systems in the Philippines.

The Filipinos' entrepreneurial spirit, suppressed for a long time by the constraining decree of then President Ferdinand Marcos, finally burst free, triggering many entrepreneurs and businessmen to take strong interest in the technology and create a new market for cable television.

Their resolve is also the global thirst for new and powerful technologies ground them correct, with a significant number of Filipino consumers readily embracing what cable operators have to offer. But what really whetted the interest of a good portion of the populace in cable television was the Gulf War in 1991, when cable giant CNN brought to Filipino households a gallery view and blow-by-blow account of the war.

THE LEADERS

The growth of the cable television industry would not be as dramatic as what it experienced the past few years without the able and selfless stewardship of succession of PCTA officers. They strived to guide it through innumerable hurdles and bring it to what it is now.

From Magsaysay, former PCTA presidents such as Ariel Dominguez, Fernando Morales, Jose Miguel, Teddy Cruz, Jose Lobregat, Vipuda Pecia, Francisco Magbanua, Manuel Dacara, Alfonso Aseda, Allan Dungay and Lee Wong fought and lobbied to advance cable operators' rights and interests, and achieve effective interrelationships with all parties.

Realizing the need to create a major forum where industry operators, programmers and other industry people could meet to exchange views, discuss issues, forge alliances, and avail of the latest technological advances, PCTA launched the first annual Philippine Cable Television Convention and Exhibition at the Hotel Nikko Manila Garden.

It was also during this time when rules, policies, regulations and norms governing cable TV operations began to be laid down while the most disturbing and challenging issues such as overbuilding of cable systems, right to air advertising and foreign investments in Philippine cable companies started to unsettle the industry.

This emergent of the need to put order into the jumble of rules, policies and regulations, bringing to life the proposed Cable Television Law in 1998, the Senate Committee on Public Services, Public Information and Mass Media and Ways and Means filed Senate Bill No. 1411, also known as the "Cable Television Act of 1998."
